

The assembled multitude. All were hard at work.

Those who had not gone wanted to know what had happened and how it had come about, and there were those who wanted to tell all about it and say what a glorious time they had had. The result was a medley of queries and answers, more than the brainiest query editor who ever lived could answer.

But from the mill of general conversation it was learned that Richmond had won the highest honor coveted by the Mystic Shrine, the degree of Imperial Potentate of North America, that the drill team had been praised, and that it had been conceded that its band was the best one present. Some cub reporter, it seems, had come to one of the members of the band and asked him whose band it was and where it came from.

Oldest Band in the World. "Where the Blues Band, from Richmond," was the answer, "and we've been in every war since 1783." The reporter scribbled it down, and Louisville was informed the next morning that Richmond had the oldest band in the world.

The drill team, after winning the prize for the best-drilled team in the convention, was asked by special request to drill in the ballroom on Thursday night. The band, however, took them through the movements before a vast audience, and that the awarding of the prize was popular with the public mind was evident from the cheers they received. In the parade, too, the local team had the post of honor, being placed in the first of the parade last night, the fact that a guard of honor was sent to Mineral City to escort the delegates' band and the enthusiastic reception accorded to them when they returned.

Mr. Bailey then accepted amendments to his income tax provision which were suggested by Mr. Cummins, and by which the rate was increased from 3 to 2 cents and all incomes under $5,000 are exempted.

By a vote of 4 to 3, the Senate adopted the Aldrich motion postponing the further consideration of the amendment until the 15th instant.

Taking up for consideration the free list, the Senate at the night session made considerable progress. The duty on cut diamonds and other precious stones was increased to 15 per cent. ad valorem, and a duty of 5 per cent. ad valorem was placed on uncut diamonds. Hides and refined petroleum were not disposed of.

At 11 P. M. the Senate adjourned until to-morrow.

STATUE UNVEILED

Beautiful Memorial to General Stephen Vicksburg, Miss. June 11.—Several thousand Confederate veterans witnessed the unveiling of the heroic statue of General Stephen Dill Lee here to-day.

The splendid monument, designed by Kitzler, stands in National Park upon the exact spot from which General Lee directed the movement of his troops during the siege of Vicksburg. The city has been preparing for the dedication for months. The streets were really decorated with flags and bunting, the Stars and Bars and the Stars and Stripes always intertwined. The parade formed at noon, and headed by General Frederick D. Grant, a large escort of cavalry, proceeded to the National Park. The Warren Light Artillery fired a general salute, and then Henry Waterson, a member of the assembly, read the dedication. Mr. Waterson paid a notable tribute to General Lee. "He was of the best the South has to offer upon the altars of American manhood," he declared, "and could wish an American to be."

ISSUE OF BONDS SEEMS ASSURED

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] LYNCHBURG, VA., June 11.—Another step was taken last night in the proposition to issue bonds for the amount of $400,000 for municipal improvements when the ordinance ordered by the Council at the May meeting was reported and, under the rules, it can be considered. It seems to be no doubt that the ordinance will be adopted by both branches of the Council. That it will be approved by Mayor Smith there is no doubt, for he has long recommended such a step.

The Commission last night, by a vote of 7 to 3, voted to send the City Hospital from the City Almshouse, and instructed the Standing Committee on Public Institutions to purchase a site upon which a new hospital, costing about $400,000, will be erected.

The City Sergeant and his deputies were sent scurrying throughout the city and wherever they met on the streets were quickly summoned. MODEL FARM IS NOT SUCCESSFUL

Portion of Corn Land Did Not Bring Five Bushels to Acre.

[Special from a Staff Correspondent.] BLACKSBURG, VA., June 11.—While the general failure of the agricultural department of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute during the last year is the chief topic of conversation among the alumni gathered here, the unsatisfactory condition of the institute farm seems to be attracting even more attention and causing more comment.

The State owns a considerable acreage of farm land just out of the town, and, in addition, rents more than 500 acres of admirable land close to the Agricultural Hall. For this farm, an annual rental of between $1,200 and $1,500 is paid by the State. On this farm experiments in agriculture are carried on by the institute experts, and, in addition, model farming is conducted on a large scale.

This farm, known as "Smithfield," equipped with modern implements and carefully cultivated, has been reckoned as a splendid training school for young farmers, and has attracted much attention from visitors to the institute.

But recent announcements have made it plain that the farm is a failure and that its operation is a heavy drain upon the resources of the institute. It is said by those in a position to know the facts that the deficit from the farm during the year just ending will amount to at least $12,000. To meet this deficit, the institute has used the $2,500 regularly devoted to the farm, an additional $5,000 voted by the board, and $4,500 secured from the sale of stock from the farm.

While no one here seems to expect that a farm devoted to experimental agriculture will not any large profit, there is much regret at the size of the deficit. It is even rumored that the farm, during the last five years or six years, has cost the State $10,000, in addition to all the crops raised on it.

It is generally believed that the board of visitors would be content to meet this large expense if the operations of the farm were successful from the agricultural side. Unfortunately, this is not true. Some valuable experiments have been carried on, and some good results have been achieved, but the model farm as a whole has not been a success. While the exact figures cannot be given, it is stated upon good authority that some portions of the corn land did not produce more than five bushels to the acre last year, while the whole crop of corn from 135 acres of cultivation amounted to only 1,200 bushels. More than 100 tons of hay was lost last year because it was not cut until it was too tough for use, and was left on the ground until it was badly damaged.

Perhaps the most peculiar fact about the farm is the doubt as to its management. H. S. Peyton, a most competent farmer, is superintendent of the farm, but the president of the institute and the professor of animal husbandry, Dr. W. J. Quick, have both had a hand in the farm operations. Wherever the real responsibility rests, there is no doubt in the minds of many people here that something must be done promptly if the reputation of the farm and its influence upon farmers in the State are to be sustained.
